Re: Data Breaches at Retailers Show the Need for Strong National Data Security Standards in H.R. 2205

Dear Speaker Ryan and Leader Pelosi:

On behalf of the National Association of Federal Credit Unions (NAFCU), the only trade association exclusively representing the federal interests of our nation's federally-insured credit unions, I write to urge you to support your consumer constituents by supporting national data security standards for retailers and others who collect and store consumers' personal and financial information.

Data breaches have become a constant concern of the American people as major data breaches now occur with an unacceptable level of regularity. From breaches at large retailers such as Target and Home Depot that impacted over 110 million consumer records and 56 million payment cards respectively, to recent breaches at the Hyatt and Hilton Hotel chains, the concerns of American consumers are well founded. A Gallup poll conducted from October 7-11, 2015, found for the second consecutive year that 69 percent of U.S. adults are frequently or occasionally concerned about having their credit card information stolen by hackers. These staggering survey results speak for themselves and should demonstrate the need for greater Congressional attention to this issue.

Americans' sensitive financial and personally identifiable information will only be as safe as the weakest link in the security chain. While financial institutions, including credit unions, have been subject to federal standards on data security since the passage of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA), retailers and many other entities that handle sensitive personal financial data are not subject to these same standards. Consequently, many large retailers who handle financial data have become the vulnerable targets of choice for cybercriminals.

Credit unions suffer steep losses in re-establishing member safety after a data breach occurs. They are often forced to absorb fraud-related losses, many of which stem from a negligent entity's failure to protect sensitive financial and personal information in their systems. As credit unions are not-for-profit cooperatives, the nation's over 103 million credit union members—your constituents—are the ones that are ultimately impacted by these costs.

It is with this in mind that NAFCU urges you to support common sense bipartisan legislation to create national data security standards such as H.R. 2205, the Data Security Act of 2015. Introduced by Representatives Randy Neugebauer and John Carney, this legislation received strong bipartisan support in a House Financial Services Committee mark-up in December. The Data Security Act of 2015 would create flexible requirements that, while protecting consumers' data in the current environment, would also allow for and encourage innovation to protect consumers from future threats we have not yet anticipated. Additionally, the national standards created would be scalable to allow for compliance by entities of all sizes. Just as the GLBA institutes requirements that are appropriate for both the smallest credit unions and the biggest banks, this legislation would allow for appropriate standards for the smallest corner store to the largest retailers.

On behalf of our nation's credit unions and their more than 103 million members, we thank you for your attention to this important matter. We stand ready to work with you in this regard. Should you have any questions or require any additional information please contact me or Chad Adams, NAFCU's Senior Associate Director of Legislative Affairs, at 703-842-2265 or cadams@nafcuh.org.

Sincerely,
